

If you travel Interstate 65 between southern Indiana and Kentucky, expect traffic to slow down on a key bridge over the Ohio River starting later this week.

Kentucky Department of Transportation officials say lane closures are planned on The Kennedy Bridge between Louisville and southern Indiana starting Friday, Nov. 8 at midnight. The right three lanes of I-65 South are scheduled to reopen at 5 a.m. Nov. 27.

The DOT said travelers should expect traffic to slow down during the project.

The left three lanes of I-65 will be closed in December as part of the same project.

Source of this article and other great articles